

Chapter the Second.

MR. Stubbs returned the next day and brought with him the above little picture, drawn from a particular scene in the first chapter, was sure my pretty readers have forgotten. As Amintor had stori, the good parson desired Florella to finish it, which dear readily complied with, as follows.

The Little Moralists

“ This horsewhipping happened on this wicked boy ; for, as smart was over, he looked fresh matter to gratify his emotion. While he was sitting looking about him, and his in the ditch, he saw a poor fellow along with a pie. As he came to the stile, he asked the fellow what he had got there is a mutton-pie, (said he) father has treated my mother and us children with, as he had a successful harvest, and have tasted a bit of meat for night. But now I think of it

B